

SEEK WOMAN FOR TRUNK MURDERS

PLAN PROGRAM OF PUBLIC WORKS

PROJECT ENDORSED
BY RELIEF CABINET
FOR COMING WINTER

Depends On Passage Of
Welfare Bond Issue
Proposal

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 20.—A $2,000,000 public works program for the coming winter was offered the state today by Governor George White's emergency relief cabinet in return for passage at the Nov. 3 election of the $7,500,000 welfare bond issue proposal.

Cabinet members broadcast their endorsement of the bond issue suggestion, which is to be voted upon at a state-wide referendum, because, they said, it holds out the promise of "immediate relief" to the jobless. Despite opposition to the measure, which sprang up almost immediately after the scheme was suggested by Governor White and has been fanned by the Ohio farm bureau in recent weeks, the vote for endorsement by the cabinet was unanimous.

The announcement of approval by the committee followed quickly after the wheels of Governor White's unemployment relief plan were set in operation yesterday with the beginning of work in carrying out a $3,000,000 emergency winter bridge building program.

As envisioned by the relief cabinet, the welfare bond issue, if passed will allow the immediate beginning of work on the repair and improvement of the state's welfare institutions.

While all the program could not be carried out at once, scores of the unemployed would doubtless be supplied jobs at a time when jobs are badly needed, and, in addition, the welfare institutions would be furnished a long-needed rehabilitation, according to the committee.

State Agriculture Director I. S. Guthery, Health Director H. G. Southard, director of Industrial Relations Thomas A. Edmonson, a representative of the American Legion of Ohio, and Major E. O. Braught, executive secretary of the committee, were at the meeting when the unanimous vote was cast.

Although taking no vote, the committee also gave consideration to the "Springfield plan" of relief by which factory officials and home owners are urged to make long-needed repairs to supply work for the unemployed.

With that method, which was urged upon the committee by a representative of President Hoover's emergency unemployment committee, following a discovery he made in this state, hundreds of "odd jobs" could be furnished to carry many families through the winter, the committee was assured.

An appeal for help to push forward such a plan would be spread through the press and the pulpit. A "wood pile program" for every community, whereby unemployed would be put to work on community wood-cutting, also was suggested.

FAMILY QUARREL RESULTS IN DEATH

ADA, O., Oct. 20.—Shot through the heart during a family quarrel which took place at the home of his divorced wife, Lewis Danner, 54, was dead here today while officials conducted an official inquiry into the tragedy.

The shooting took place before the eyes of Brice Danner, the 16-year-old son of the Danners.

Roy Allerdine, brother-in-law of the slain man, was alleged to have fired the fatal shot. He was not held, however, pending a formal verdict by Coroner Floyd Elliott. Coroner Elliott stated unofficially that he believed Allerdine shot in self defense.

EX-CONVICT KILLED AND THREE OFFICERS WOUNDED IN BATTLE

BELIEVE ARREST OF
THREE SOLVES LONG LIST OF ROBBERIES

Valuable Goods Are Confiscated When Suspects Held

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Oct. 20.—A three-state burglar band was believed broken up here today with the arrest of three men and a woman and the confiscation of thousands of dollars worth of allegedly stolen goods along with an arsenal which included a suitcase laden with 200 sticks of dynamite.

The raid on the headquarters of the purported gang of thieves was staged by a squad of local police aided by Chief of Police L. E. Sherry of Upper Sandusky, Ohio, and Sheriff L. Weatherholtz of Wyandot County.

Those arrested in the spectacular raid were Lewis Short, 30, of Huntington, Doris Bennett, 23, who said she was from Walburn, Mich., Harry M. Myers, 34, and James Hartley, 30, both of whom gave Detroit, Mich., as their addresses.

A second woman, who is believed to be connected with the burglar band, is under arrest at Akron, O., according to Sheriff Weatherholtz. The official declined to reveal the name of the woman.

Sheriff Weatherholtz also declared that another man is being sought as a member of the band. Short and Myers were expected to be returned to Ohio today by the Ohio authorities to answer charges in connection with the robberies of two drugstores, one in Upper Sandusky and another in Carey, O.

Huntington police said they would hold Hartley on a charge of carrying concealed weapons. The woman will be held as an accomplice in connection with the robberies.

Police officials declared that they seized from the headquarters of the alleged burglar gang two trunks and twelve suitcases bulging with kodaks, fountain pens, men's suits and overcoats, hats, women's apparel and jewelry.

Some of the hats bore the names of establishments in Detroit, and Toledo. Identification marks had been removed, however, from much of the clothing.

The apartment here, officials said, had been occupied since October 13, leading investigators to believe that the gang had been operating since that date.

Ohio authorities, it was said, traced the gang to this city through an automobile license number and through questioning of the woman held in Akron.

Huntington police have had the gang under surveillance since last Friday.

Efforts will be made today by Ashland, Ky., police, who are en route here, to link the alleged burglar gang with a store robbery there last Sunday night. Huntington police, meantime, continued their investigations to ascertain if the band participated in any recent robberies here.

SEEK NEGROES FOR SHOOTING OF GIRL

DOVER, O., Oct. 20.—Holding a Negro prisoner, Dover police conducted a search today for two other men wanted as the assailants of Stella Capozziella, 18, who was shot in the thigh last night during an attempted robbery of the store operated by the girl's mother, Mrs. Felicia Capozziella.

The Negro, who gave his name as William Dogell, of Birmingham, Ala., was captured by officers who found him in an allegedly intoxicated condition on the floor of a barn near here shortly after the three Negroes fled from the scene of the shooting. The girl's condition was believed to be not serious.

The three men, all said to have been intoxicated, entered the Capozziella store and purchased tobacco from young Tony Capozziella. They then drew pistols and one of the trio pressed his gun against the girl's head and pulled the trigger. The gun failed to discharge.

The girl was shot as she entered the store to investigate. The three Negroes ran from the building after firing one shot at her.

Detectives Shoot It Out
With Killers In New York

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—Heavy battle casualties were listed today along the underworld war front—one ex-convict dead and three detectives seriously wounded.

The trio of detectives had gone into a rooming house on the upper west side where they had trapped a gangster trio of killers. The detectives went in with their heads up. They came out bullet-riddled on a stretcher after exchanging shot for shot at barely more than punching distance.

Enrico Battaglia, 26, former convict, shot it out until he was killed. He was wanted for his part in the cold-blooded killing of Patrolman Jerry Brosnan in Fordham Hospital two years ago. Brosnan, assigned to guard a wounded prisoner, was peppered with bullets as he dozed.

The wounded detectives in the hospital today were Edward Willis, James De Ferraro and Guido Pessagno. Pessagno, with five bullet wounds, was in a critical condition. The two companions of the slain gunman leaped over the bodies of the dead and wounded and escaped over adjoining roofs despite a cordon of police, armed with machine guns and rifles, thrown around several blocks.

"Thousands of excitement-hungry New Yorkers thronged the area to watch the house-to-house search by police squads lugging their sub-machine guns with them."

The scene of the gun battle was in West Seventy-Eighth St., near the Museum of Natural History where the neolithic exhibits were no more strange than this by-product of modern gangsterism.

SLAYER OF RECLUSE SOUGHT AFTER BODY IS FOUND BATTERED

Robbery Is Thought
Motive; Clues Aid
Authorities

MEDINA, O., Oct. 20.—Convinced that the aged recluse was murdered and that robbery was the motive, Medina County authorities today pressed an extensive hunt for the assailant of John Oyler Halliday, 92, whose battered body was found in his Chippawa Lake shack, a few miles southwest of here.

Armed with several clues, Sheriff Lyman Buffington and Prosecutor David Porter launched an immediate search for the slayer who was believed to have committed the crime sometime last Saturday.

The body was found lying on the floor of the two-room shack in which Halliday, a civil war veteran, had made his home for more than fifty years. He had been dealt a violent blow on the back of the head which caused almost instantaneous death, Buffington said.

Shortly after the body was discovered, Buffington made a flying trip to Wayne County, presumably on a tip that the murderer could be found there.

A blood-stained hammer, matted with white hair, was found lying on the floor near the body in the shack which had been ransacked, apparently in search of money. The crime was discovered when neighbors, who became worried because they had not seen the man since Saturday, broke into the home.

For several years Halliday was known to have hoarded money and kept it hidden in his home, but in recent years he was believed to have taken it to a local bank, upon the advice of friends. He had been paying all his bills by checks, it was said.

Halliday had always maintained protection of his home with dogs, usually having six of the animals about him. He had feared intrusion recently when his last dog had died, which he believed had been poisoned.

HOCKEY SEASON OPENING

MEAL IN CRACKER

Busy businessmen won't have to take time out for lunch. Instead, they'll munch one or two crackers. At least that's the prediction of Miss LaVaughn Dennison of Wellsburg, W. Va., who is doing graduate work at Ohio State university, Columbus. She has made a cracker which she contends contains all of the vitamins except "C," which can be kept for long periods of time. Miss Dennison believes the cracker will be of use where large food supplies are needed, in isolated regions, and it also can be given to children.

YOUTH CONFESSES MURDER OF FATHER

LANCASTER, O., Oct. 20.—Emmeshed by his own alleged confession, Sisco Carper, 18-year-old farmer boy, was in the grips of the law today awaiting action of a special session of the grand jury in connection with the brutal slaying of his aged father, Harvey Carper of Whistler.

The youth confessed committing the crime yesterday, according to the statement of Sheriff Gale Seiler when he became twisted in dates as to the last time he saw his father while being grilled by authorities seeking to unravel the mystery of the aged man's murder.

According to his alleged confession, young Carper killed his father with a shotgun during a quarrel while the two were squirrel hunting on Car Ridge near here.

TWO UNITED MINE WORKERS ARE HELD

ATHENS, O., Oct. 20.—Two officials of the Ohio District of United Mine Workers and twelve miners were held under bond today on charges arising from their activities in a mine strike a month ago.

Lee Hall, president, and David Watkins, vice president of the Ohio district of the mine workers organization and the twelve Millfield miners pleaded not guilty yesterday to indictments charging them with inciting to riot and assault.

The indictments were returned by the county grand jury after an investigation of disorders in a Millfield mine strike in September.

CAPONE FUND BEING RAISED IN CHICAGO TO HELP GANGSTER

Extra Liquor Price Contributes $300 A Week To Fund

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—With Al Capone facing "a federal rap"—possibly seventeen years in prison—the Chicago underworld, of which he is the supreme dictator, is going to the front for him with coin of the realm. A "Capone fund" aggregating $50,000 a week is being raised, it was learned today.

Every speakeasy in Chicago is contributing in this manner to the fund. The Capone syndicate has slapped an extra $2 on the price of every five-gallon can of alcohol sold in the city. Some time ago the price of these five-gallon cans was "pegged" at $30. It has now jumped to $32 a can to every saloonkeeper. The $2 goes to the fund.

Twenty-five thousand five gallon cans of alcohol are sold weekly in the Chicago metropolitan district. This means an added revenue of "fifty-grand" a week which is to be used to help Capone in his fight against imprisonment and to make him as comfortable as it is possible to be in prison in the event he is forced to do a long "stretch."

Capone's conviction is the topic of conversation in every speakeasy, beer hall and roadhouse in Chicago. The unanimous opinion in this lower strata is that "the big fellow" is getting a rough deal. Capone is well liked for he has brought a semblance of harmony out of the chaos in the underworld. It is only within the last year that Capone has become the absolute dictator of Chicago's underworld and violence has dropped to a much lower level. Things are more "business-like," say the speakeasy proprietors.

How long a prison term Capone will get, and who will succeed him as Chicago's underworld king, are subjects that are evoking endless discussion in the speakeasies and among the sporting element of the town. Nobody knows the answer to the first question but, in answering the last question, many persons well-informed on underworld developments say, "Frankie Rio."

Frankie Rio is a close friend of Capone. Rio was with Capone in Philadelphia when the latter was arrested for carrying a gun and forced to serve a year's sentence in a Philadelphia jail in 1929. Rio is described as a "smart man." Almost as good an organizer as Capone.

All other candidates apparently are "out." The status of virtually every underworld leader in Chicago has been reduced to middlemen. They now buy alcohol, beer and whisky from the Capone syndicate and retail it to saloonkeepers, speakeasy proprietors and beer hall owners in their respective territories. They pay $37.50 a barrel to Capone or his agents for beer and retail it at $55 a barrel. It may be the price will be raised to $60 a barrel to further augment the "Capone fund" that is now being raised.

Capone, meanwhile, is in seclusion at his headquarters in the Lexington Hotel awaiting next Friday when he and his lawyers will appear in Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson's court. On that day Capone's counsel will file motions designed to combat his conviction for income tax fraud. The date of the hearing, originally set for today, was advanced when Defense Attorney Michael Ahern asked more time for preparation.

Should Judge Wilkerson refuse to grant Capone a new trial Friday, the judge has it in his power to refuse an appeal bond and to order him to prison immediately. In that event Capone's only hope of freedom pending a decision on his appeal would be to ask the circuit court of appeals to grant a bond.

Capone's lawyers have not indicated what motions they will make on Friday before Judge Wilkerson. It is expected that if Judge Wilkerson overrules the motions he will then announce the sentence Capone must serve. Capone's sentence will be one of the most significant pronouncements ever handed down from a federal bench.

and Miss Vincent, however, have neither confirmed nor denied the report.

Governor Balzar of Nevada, state Senator Getchell, Matt Penrose, warden of the Nevada state prison, and J. C. McKay, Reno sportsman, are in Salt Lake City with Dempsey organizing the moose hunt. Joe Vincent, father of Dempsey's reported bride to be, will also be a member of the hunting party.

Dempsey said that he and Miss Vincent had not been married, but refused to make any statement as to their future plans.

JAPAN - CHINA REJECT ALL PEACE PROPOSALS

GENEVA, Oct. 20.—Efforts of the council of the League of Nations to bring the Sino-Japanese Manchurian quarrel to an end were at a dead standstill today with both Japan and China rejecting all peace proposals.

A meeting of the "committee of thirteen"—composed of twelve members of the council, excluding Japan and China, but including Prentiss B. Gilbert, the American observer—was summoned for this evening to continue the search for a peace formula.

Briland's proposal for a compromise, set forth in a conversation with Kenkichi Yoshizawa, Japanese spokesman here, met with a repetition of the demands which Tokyo has clung tenaciously since the opening of negotiations here.

The substance of the Japanese thesis is that withdrawal of Japanese troops from Manchuria cannot be considered until the security of Japanese nationals there is assured. And Japan has made it clear she has small confidence of the ability of either the league or of China to guarantee such security.

Dr. Alfred Sze, China's spokesman, maintained a no less unbending attitude in his conversations with Lord Ropell, British foreign secretary. He reiterated China's refusal to enter into direct negotiations with Japan until Japanese troops are out of the non-treaty zone in Manchuria.

cause of the influence of Mrs. Edison, his widow. Mrs. Edison for twenty-five years was the president of the ladies' guild of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Orange and was a moving spirit in the gathering of the funds with which the present edifice was built.

It was through Mrs. Edison that the Rev. Arthur H. Brown, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Orange started yesterday morning a series of three short prayers a day, at 8 in the morning, at noon and at sundown which will be continued through today. The next service will be those with which the dead wizard is consigned to the dust.

In his prayer at sun-down last night, the Rev. Brown quoted from the book of Ecclesiastes in which Jehovah painted the story of the heavens.

"This man," continued the clergyman, looking down at the still form of Edison, in his bronze casket, "was also touched with the spirit of Jehovah."

"He stands out from among us for his love of truth, for his patient persistence, for his humility before the great facts of life, for his eagerness to be of benefit to the rest of mankind. In him were all the elements that go to make the man of God."

"His death was a fulfillment of his valuable life. It was as gentle as though he had fallen asleep. His story was told in the great poem of Alfred Tennyson, 'Sunset and evening star—'

And then the clergyman went on and finished the poem in a low voice. The soft voice of the minister rose and fell in cadence over the aroma of ten thousand flowers that were banked against the walls of the room. There were 800 orphans in a wreath eight feet high which was presented by the employees of the Edison Illuminating company. There were thousands of other blossoms and autumn leaves and palms with drooping fronds.

Outside the crowd wound slowly to the building which housed the remains of the inventor. Ten thousand people passed the bier, came and paused for a second for a last look at him. Went on and out. All creeds. All colors. All ages. The bent and the infirm. The young and eager. Moving slowly past for one last look at him. Edison. The inventor, a man whose like will not be seen again for a long, long time. Maybe, a thousand years.

All through the day telegrams and cablegrams and wireless messages poured into the home in Llewellyn Park and into the office at the factory. Messages from the Pope and from Mussolini and from the French Ambassador at Washington and from thousands of others of the world's great.

Today will be even a greater day. The streams of condoling messages will inundate the house and the factory. Henry Ford and Harvey Firestone, the two cronies of Edison will probably arrive in West Orange before nightfall.

President Hoover, it was expected, will arrive tomorrow, some time shortly after noon. He will stay just long enough to attend the services and will then depart for the capital, it was understood.

PHYSICIAN'S WIFE ACCUSED OF DEATHS BY YOUNG BROTHER

Bodies Shipped Into Los Angeles; Two States Join Search

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 20.—Breaking down under police grilling, B. J. McKinnell, 22, a university student, today confessed that his sister, Mrs. Ruth Judd, had admitted killing Agnes Lerol and Hedwig Samuelson, and shipping their mangled bodies in trunks from Phoenix, Ariz., to Los Angeles.

"My little sister said she was 'perfectly justified,'" McKinnell sobbed.

McKinnell was unable to explain "why" his sister committed the double murder and that "why" was the question officers of southern California and Arizona today sought to answer.

Mrs. Judd meanwhile had eluded officers.

Following the discovery here of the trunks containing the grisly remains of murdered women, officers of two states launched an intensive search for Mrs. Winifred Ruth Judd, pretty 27-year-old wife of a Los Angeles and Phoenix, Ariz., physician.

The dead women, identified as Miss Agnes Ann Lerol, 35, an X-ray technician at Grunow Memorial Clinic, Phoenix, Ariz., and Miss Hedwig Samuelson, 24-year-old school teacher, were found in two trunks in the Southern Pacific Railroad station last night.

The search for Mrs. Judd approached a climax early today with the discovery of a missing portion of Miss Samuelson's dismembered body. The missing remains, object of an all-night search, were found in a suitcase in an anteroom of the railway station.

The trunks were shipped here from Phoenix, Sunday.

A baggage man, Andrew V. Anderson, saw blood dripping from the trunks and declined to release them to a woman and young man who presented checks for them. Anderson said he thought the trunks had contained contraband venison. He called police who made the gruesome discovery.

Mrs. Judd became the focal point of the investigation when she was identified by police as the young woman who had appeared at the railroad station and sought to claim the two trunks.

Search for Mrs. Judd extended to Yuma, Ariz., when investigation indicated that the woman, after having been refused possession of the trunks on account of the suspicion which she had aroused, was supposed to have purchased a ticket for Yuma.

Mrs. Judd, however, was not on the train when it passed through Yuma enroute to Phoenix early today.

Dr. Judd, who said he had not seen his wife for more than two months, said the first he knew of the murders was when the police notified him. He said he left Mrs. Judd in Phoenix two months ago when he came here to seek a new location.

Mrs. Judd's brother, B. J. McKinnell, a student at the University of Southern California told police that his sister had asked him to call for the trunks and throw them into the Pacific Ocean.

According to police, McKinnell said when arrested, "I hope she gets away; she's my sister."

In one of the two murder trunks police found a small caliber revolver, and numerous pictures of Miss Samuelson and Miss Lerol, in addition to letters addressed to them from Juneau, Alaska, and Seattle, Wash.

Police learned that Mrs. Judd, who had been employed as a secretary at the same hospital, in Phoenix where Miss Lerol had been employed, recently had quarreled with Miss Lerol and Miss Samuelson.

Phoenix police advised Los An-

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 20.—"The general code of Ohio, section 13,964, Columbus, Ohio."

A letter bearing this address was delivered today by the statehouse postman to Attorney General Gilbert Bettman.

This is how it happened:

A woman, who owns property just outside of Dayton, made inquiry at the state department of public works concerning the location of the boundary line between her land and that adjoining which belongs to the state.

A. T. Connor, director of public works, advised her to "apply to the State of Ohio, under the provisions of section 13,964, of the general code of Ohio, for a determination of the boundary line between your property and the state's property."

So, she did.

JAP FREIGHTER CARRIES 44 TO WATERY GRAVE

Japan mourns the death of 44 men who went down with the Japanese steamer Yonan Maru, above. The freighter foundered off the far western tip of the Aleutian islands and a shifting cargo is believed to have made the ship unmanageable. The President Jefferson, on which Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh were passengers, bound for Seattle, turned back to look for the freighter but was unable to find any trace of her in heavy seas.

the poster division, the bust division, the magazine division, the press division, and so on.

The press division is one of the largest. Here in a large chamber men and women are hard at it preparing tracts on Washington, the farmer, the soldier, the statesman, the builder, the church goer, the friend, the land-owner, the student, and etc. The whole length of one of the walls is occupied with charts showing the results of this outpouring of press matter. The results are amazing, showing how thoroughly the country is being blanketed with the interesting stories.

One fourth of the entire floor is devoted to the mailing department. Here huge piles of matter are constantly being wheeled in and wheeled out to be mailed, under special congressional frank, to the four corners of the land.

Everything is free. Do you want a poster, text-books, pictures, plays, pageants, busts, speech, just drop a line to Sol and it will come to you by return mail, gratis. It is all paid for out of the federal treasury. Over it all Sol presides, busy, cheerful, full of ideas, and immensely enthusiastic. He takes no pay. He is a wealthy man. When the great mass of his congressional colleagues deserted the capital during the summer's distressing heat, Sol kept right on with his work. He says he never engaged in any endeavor he enjoyed more, or got greater satisfaction out of the doing.

They work hard and steadily, but Sol is no slave driver. He is modern in every sense of the word. Humane treatment of workers he believes means direct and concrete results in increased efficiency, loyalty, and industry. So Sol, alone of all government executives, has instituted the five day week in his unique organization.

The experiment has attracted wide attention of government workers and may play an important role in the growing movement for a five day week for all government employees.

One is the radio division; another the pageant division turning out historic pageants for school and public use and available free of charge; a third is the movie division; the next the text book division, the costumes division, the photograph division,

GOING AROUND IN WASHINGTON

By ROBERT S. ALLEN

International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—One of the greatest pieces of public sentiment mobilization since the war is being carried out by the United States Sesquicentennial Commission.

Every agency of public opinion is being utilized in its campaign to make the people of the country George Washington minded. Newspapers, magazines, text books, schools, plays, movies, photographs, sculpture, music, historians, teachers, even the President of the United States, have been pressed into this great movement.

A great wealth of publicity background is being built up on which to foundation the nine-months Washington sesquicentennial celebration that runs from February 22 to November 26, of next year. Old and young are being taught in countless ways the story of the Father of His Country, his life, his times, his ideals and his significance.

The guiding genius of this great endeavor is Representative Sol Bloom, of New York. August and famous names fill the roll of the Commission, but Sol's is the driving force and industry. It was he who led the fight in congress for the generous appropriation to finance the movement.

It was he who conceived the elaborate organization that takes up a full floor in one of Washington's newest and largest office buildings and from which daily pours out an unending flood of Washingtonia.

It was Sol who got George M. Cohan to write the official Sesquicentennial song and present it in a special binding to the President. It was Sol who sang it to Mr. Hoover, when George plead a hoarse throat.

And it was Sol, Indiana born son of German-Jewish parents, who rushed into the breach when too Anglo conscious citizens protested against the portrayal of the Yorktown surrender spectacle.

"The British ambassador has been invited," they complained. "This will hurt British feelings and impair Anglo-American relations."

"Nonsense," Sol replied. "What was good enough for Washington is good enough for us."

And he had his way. When Sir Ronald Lindsay, his Majesty's ambassador goes to Yorktown for the elaborate pageant this month, he will see just how British might bowed before the little handful of "ragged rebels."

It is all Sol's show and a gorgeous one. A visit to the Commission's offices is a sight not to be missed. Office after office filled with busy workers. And all enormously enthusiastic and fond of Sol.

They work hard and steadily, but Sol is no slave driver. He is modern in every sense of the word. Humane treatment of workers he believes means direct and concrete results in increased efficiency, loyalty, and industry. So Sol, alone of all government executives, has instituted the five day week in his unique organization.

The experiment has attracted wide attention of government workers and may play an important role in the growing movement for a five day week for all government employees.

Lee died last February 24.

Suds Tell Truth about Soaps, says Expert

Suds Pry and Roll out Particles of Dirt, Says Mr. Alfred Stanford

Sudsy soap best

Chipso Makes ½ More Suds—Rolls out Stubborn Dirt Quickly

"Wise women will judge a soap by the amount of suds it makes," said Alfred Stanford, well-known laundry expert, in his laboratory in New York City.

"If I wanted to be funny," he said, "I could say this was the dirt about soaps. But I'm serious. Very few women know why one soap is better than another—or, in fact, why soap takes out dirt."

"Dirt lodges in the mesh of fabric. If you plunge dirty clothes in hot water, the meshes shrink and grip the dirt tighter. That's why a washing should start out with lukewarm suds. Suds act like a lever, they slip into the meshes, and pry the dirt out."

"The more suds a soap makes, the more quickly it lifts out dirt. In recent tests, I have proved that Chipso makes one-half more suds than any other leading household soap."

Soaps Harsh to Colors Hurt Hands!

"Don't use strong soaps," says soap expert

"Many women who wouldn't play with fire, risk the beauty of their hands with strong soaps," said Miss Hope Andrews, in an interview yesterday. "A soap that tends to fade colors is a strong alkali soap. It's bound to roughen the skin and split the cuticle. I always advise Chipso," she went on. "From my many tests, I know it's a rich, pure soap—safe for dainty colors and a woman's sensitive hands."

WAITS MASTER'S VOICE IN VAIN

"Spot," a cute little pup on the Edison estate at West Orange, N. J., seems to realize that his beloved master, Thomas A. Edison, has passed away. While the world mourns the inventor's death, "Spot" sits disconsolately on the steps of the Edison home waiting for the voice he knews will never come. He used to accompany the great inventor on his daily walks around the estate.

"FOUR HUNDRED" FIGURES

Social Leaders Of New York And Nation As Seen By Ethelda Bedford, Gazette Staff Writer

By ETHELDA BEDFORD
Author of "Dear Diary"

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—She's changed her name twice, but one seldom thinks of her by any name except her first—Muriel Vanderbilt. Of THE Vanderbilts.

Now she's Mrs. Henry Delafield Phelps. She was once Mrs. Frederick Cameron Church. As Mrs. Phelps she resides in her luxurious Newport home, "Dudley House." As Mrs. Church she lived on Beacon Hill, atop snooty Boston. And as Muriel Vanderbilt she set a pace for the blue bloods of Long Island, as her mother, Mrs. Graham Fair Vanderbilt, has as large and beautiful an estate as you'd imagine a Vanderbilt would have. "Fairmount" it's called, at Manhasset, Long Island.

Tall and not the least angular, Mrs. Phelps has dark brown hair, which glistens with golden lights. She effects a charming nonchalance in the arrangement of her coiffure. Her thick curly locks are bobbed and lie carefully in ringlets.

Vivacious
There is something theatrical about the way she dresses, the tilt of her hats, the ringlets against her cheeks and high forehead, her bright rouge in a cupid's bow on her naturally well-shaped lips. She's known for her dynamic personality and sparkling vivaciousness.

Muriel ranks as one of the most gracious and charming of all of the Vanderbilts. Those who know her well and those who only have a how-do-you-do acquaintance claim she does not possess one snobbish trait.

Her first wedding awed society with its lavishness, but her second was anything but Vanderbiltian in contrast. Very simple, as the bride requested that the money which might have been spent on presents and fussy feathers be put to use for the unemployed. She has given much time to charity work, especially since the depression.

Not Extravagant
Although she is a granddaughter of the late William K. Vanderbilt,

Mrs. Henry Delafield Phelps

Sr., and a great-great-granddaughter of Cornelius Vanderbilt, the Staten Island ferryboat captain, who lived to pile millions and establish his clan well on the social ladder, Mrs. Phelps never has been extravagant, or squandered her riches as certain other rich girls have.

Likes sports—horseback riding best. Owns several horses. Some of which have carried away prizes. She is a familiar figure at Belmont Park.

Looks stunning in sports clothes. But never muffs a chance to look 100 per cent feminine. Goes in for lots of gay printed frocks and flattering, brimmed hats. Wore peach chiffon and white fox and a huge pink hat with a single deep-pink rose on its brim at her last wedding.

Has long been called "Society's Golden Girl."

OHIO HIGHWAY OFFICIALS LACK POWER TO SPLIT DIXIE HIGHWAY

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 20.—State highway officials declared today they are without power to order establishment of an eastern branch of U. S. Route 25, or the Dixie Highway, which has been requested by officials at Kenton, Xenia, Bellefontaine, Springfield, Yellow Springs and Urbana.

If an eastern branch is to be established joining the present route, which touches Lima, Wakarusa, Sidney, Troy and Dayton, the order must come from the executive committee of the American Association of State Highway Officials.

Under the plan proposed to the state highway department, the road would be divided at Findlay, joining again at Cincinnati. The principal request was said to have come from the Springfield city commission, although other cities along the proposed eastern branch also had submitted a demand.

As now proposed, the eastern branch would follow state route 21 from Findlay to Kenton and from Kenton to Xenia, via Bellefontaine, Urbana, West Liberty, Springfield and Yellow Springs over state route 53, then following U. S. route 42 from Xenia to Cincinnati by way of Lebanon.

Highway Director O. W. Merrill can only make recommendations to the national association about the proposed change, it was said at the highway department.

At a recent annual meeting, however, the executive committee of the association went on record as being opposed to further splitting of U. S. routes.

MRS. JESSE CLINE REMOVED BY DEATH

Mrs. Anna Cline, 42, wife of Jesse Cline, died at her home on the Carr farm west of Yellow Springs, Tuesday morning at 5:29 o'clock. She had been ill nine months following an operation performed at a Dayton hospital and her condition had been serious three weeks.

Mrs. Cline was born at New Jasper March 18, 1889, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William LeValley. She had spent her entire life in Greene County and was a member of the Church of God, Springfield, and the Moosehart Legion of Xenia.

Her marriage to Mr. Cline took place August 17, 1907 and he survives with the following children: Raymond, Springfield; Mae, Velma, Mildred, Carl, Pauline and Jesse Jr., at home. She also leaves her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William LeValley, this city, and the following brothers and sisters: Jacob and Lester LeValley and Mrs. Pearl Shaw, Springfield; Mrs. Sylvia McClanahan, Yellow Springs; Mrs. Mary Mendenhall and Albert LeValley, Xenia. She also survived by two grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held at the home Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock and burial will be made in Woodland Cemetery.

PAYS TRIBUTE TO EDISON

(Note—The following poetic tribute to Thomas Alva Edison, was written by George F. A. Killeen, Xenia, who has contributed other poetic passages to these columns.—Editor)

—THOMAS ALVA EDISON—

He walks with Immortality—
For, Death has touched his silvered mane.
His greatness, was—his simplicity—
Our heritage—his honored name!

We cannot land, too much, this man;
Nor eulogize, nor e'er portray
The power of his potent plan—
"He turned the night-time into day!"

Couched in the clay from whence he came,
This Genius—(He made the world progress);
Now heads the list, on each "Scroll of Fame,"
And so we lay him down to rest!

—By George F. A. Killeen.

COUNTY MAY APPROPRIATE ANY AMOUNT FOR T.B. CATTLE TESTS

Commissioners of Greene County may appropriate any amount they deem adequate to take care of tuberculin cattle tests in the county, according to an opinion delivered to the board by Prosecuting Attorney Marcus McCallister.

Commissioners had sought legal advice on the question of whether they are compelled to make an appropriation demanded by the state department of agriculture to finance these tests.

Replying to this question, Prosecutor McCallister informed the board that under the law "county commissioners are authorized and empowered to make such appropriations from the general funds as will enable them to cooperate effectively with cattle owners, the department of agriculture and the United States Bureau of Animal Industry in the eradication of tuberculosis."

"The power given the counties makes it optional with them as to what amount will be necessary for carrying on these tests," Prosecutor McCallister declared. "Commissioners are empowered to use their own discretion with reference to the amount to be appropriated," he said. The specific question has never arisen in the courts. The prosecutor told commissioners that the constitutionality of the act, challenged a few years ago in a case in Miami County, was eventually upheld by the Ohio Supreme Court.

"Commissioners of that county in 1927 appropriated only $2,000 for the tests, a rather small amount in view of the amount of work carried on in that particular year and subsequent years. I assume they were within their jurisdiction when they made it and did not have to follow the request of the agricultural department and appropriate a greater sum."

TWO PARTICIPANTS IN CUTTING SCRAPE GIVEN HEAVY FINES

Charged with drunkenness and disorderly conduct, George Riley, 67, colored, of Newark and Columbus, who has been confined in the County Infirmary hospital with serious injuries received in a cutting scrape that reportedly started over a poker game October 1, was fined $100 and costs by Municipal Judge E. Dawson Smith Tuesday morning. He pleaded guilty.

Riley was one of two Negroes arrested and held under guard at the hospital, after having carved each other about the throat with knives or razors, sequel to a poker party said to have been in progress at the home of Harold "Moke" Aikens, colored, 927 E. Church St.

Mart Walker, 28, colored, E. Third St., the other participant in the cutting fray, was also fined $100 and costs recently for intoxication and disorderly conduct.

DEVICE FOR STREET FINDING INVENTED BY POLICE EXPERT

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 20.—An automatic street finding device, designed by Sgt. Everett Fisher, radio technician of the police radio station here, is expected to speed up the dispatching of radio cars on the St. Louis Metropolitan Police Department.

The device consists about 5,000 wires and several small electric motors. There is a switchboard with the 1,354 streets of the city listed alphabetically and opposite each name a hole to receive a plug. When two plugs are placed opposite the names of two streets, any threads on the map automatically intersect on the map at the correct streets.

Prior to the adoption of the new device, Sgt. Fisher estimated it took three minutes to locate the exact scene of a crime. He estimates the work of the new machine will do it in three seconds.

FORTY-FOUR YEARS AS TEACHER

Thomas A. White, Jamestown, Retires After Long Career As Public Servant

A teacher in Greene, Clinton and Fayette County schools forty-four years is the record of Thomas A. White, Jamestown, who was retired on his income from the teachers' retirement system September 1.

Mr. White has mostly taught in one room schools except for eight years when he taught in graded schools in Sabina, Bowersville and New Burlington. He taught in Clinton County twenty-seven years, nineteen years of which were in Richland Twp. in Fayette County two years and in Greene County fifteen years. His last school was East Point in Xenia Twp.

Between 800 and 1,000 pupils have been taught by Mr. White, he discloses, and many of the children in his schools in the past few years were sons and daughters of his former pupils. Mr. White was born near Plymouth, Fayette County, one of a family of four children, and because the father was a man of little means, the children received only a common school education. Having to help at home when a boy White had to rely on himself for a great deal of his schooling and was never able to attend a full term.

In order to take work higher than that usually taught in the common school, White, as a boy, taught several of the classes. The last school he attended was at Leesburg, O., and his teacher was Frank Barrett. The last year he studied at this school, in 1886, he took the county examination at Wilfington and received his first teacher's certificate. The fall of that year he taught his first school—a one-room school in Wilson Twp., Clinton County, and he has taught continuously from then until the time of his retirement.

Mr. White has one son and three daughters.

"I have always tried to be loyal to those under whom I worked and I am glad I have taught school," he says in reminiscing over his days spent in the "little red school houses."

THOMAS ALVA EDISON

The death of Thomas Alva Edison seems in its nearness, like an event marking the close of an era. The perspective which comes with the passing of time may reveal it as something less than that. But certainly there is no possible way of writing an intelligent story of the growth of the new type of civilization which has distinguished the last one hundred years, without taking the work and character of Mr. Edison into very large account.

To a remarkable degree Thomas Edison was instrumental in providing the world with the products of applied science that nobody literally and figuratively light the world, all but eliminate time and space so far as human communication is concerned, make the luxury of our fathers seem almost like penury compared with the comfort of today, and render life everywhere unprecedentedly cosmopolitan.

Scores of the common appearances of existence that were the semi-magical wonders of yesterday are original gifts from Mr. Edison to the world. The incandescent lamp and the phonograph alone, place civilization eternally in his debt. In numerous instances where others conceived the germ of ideas and made pioneer developments, it was left to Mr. Edison to add the final inspired touch, necessary to produce perfection.

For Thomas Edison the world was a laboratory wherein one could study and gain knowledge, and harness natural forces in cunningly devised and frequently superlatively delicate machinery; making them work for their masters as the enslaved Genghis served their master the wise Selim.

Of this pastime Mr. Edison never wearied. He seemed to grudge even the hours that nature demanded for sleep and eating, because they were hours when he could not be ferreting out secrets and putting them through their paces. And while it may not be true that genius is applied talent, certainly throughout his long life Mr. Edison demonstrated the productive and beneficial possibilities of applied genius in a way few other men have done.

With his passing, Thomas Edison takes his place in history as one of the great inventive minds the race has produced. Perhaps he was the greatest up to now. It would be difficult to disprove a statement that he was.

Along with his superb specialized mental equipment Mr. Edison possessed other attributes. He had balance, he had courage, he had character, he had vision, and he had a passion to promote the real good of the race. He was a man who would have enriched the world by being in it, had he remained a humble, unknown telegrapher to the end of his days instead of becoming a main driving force in the development of life as we know it today.

CONFIDENCE

A statement by the Chicago Association of Stock Exchange Firms points out that in terms of real wealth, America is richer today than ever before. Then it specifies:

Our natural resources are unimpaired by depression.
Our wealth in the form of buildings, machinery and equipment of all kinds increases year after year.
The progress of America as a going concern depends upon the spirit of Americans.

With the solid facts of wealth evident on all sides, the exercise of reason always results in faith in America.

Confidence in a land like ours is common sense. The fact that prosperity springs from confidence is as easily demonstrable as is the fact that beyond a certain point depression is nursed along by lack of confidence and fear—a fear for which those who entertain it can find no ground whatsoever in those solid evidences of real wealth that lie all about them.

The time has come for the people of this country to cease sitting around, wringing their hands and wondering "what's going to happen next" and when things are going to pick up. They will pick up when the people pick themselves up and begin thinking of getting in on the ground floor of the prosperity that is at hand.

SHAW FORGETS

Says George Bernard Shaw, addressing the people of the United States with a sneer on his face for all things not bolshevistic, "Your President, who became famous by feeding the starving millions of war devastated Europe, cannot feed his own people in time of peace."

We do not like to think that Mr. Shaw has become the victim of any mental disorder, yet something must be the matter with him. Otherwise he would remember that it is not the business of the President of the United States to feed the people of the country and supervise and manage their private, domestic affairs for them as though he were a Manco Capac. Mr. Shaw should know that it is the business of the President of the United States to perform certain constitutional duties and enforce the laws enacted by representatives of the people, who are quite capable of feeding themselves without assistance from any paternal executive.

The United States Supreme Court has started its regular October session. That causes no excitement because the country knows the court will get down to business and do its work without any nonsense.

Maybe the Chinese "war lords" won't have to divide up the country after all. Perhaps Japan will take that job off their hands.

The news that school teachers are starving to death in Chicago will be great propaganda for Moscow.

At least the Eugene has escaped one thing. Nobody has yet denounced it as immoral.

No, Mr. Hoover isn't a good politician; but isn't it possible that the people may care more about other qualities in a President just now?

It certainly is tough when a man wants to go to jail for the winter and a judge tells him he must stay out on probation for five years.

We agree with the Kansas City Star that bombing cannot be tolerated, but up to now, nobody has found the way to stop it.

So far as the United States is concerned, the gold problem is how to get the stuff thawed out and into circulation.

MY NEW YORK

By JAMES ASWELL

NEW YORK.—Wide-eyed wanderings:

Tompkins square, a swarm of youth and the defeated, of Italy and Hungary and Russia and New York. Here St. Mark's place, redolent of Naples, if uglier, parallels Seventh street, which abounds in Hungarian signs and Gypsy basement restaurants. The park is crowded, on a Sunday afternoon, with a hundred diametrical destinies. Women in shawls, looking as old as the world, selling immense pretzels strung on sticks in baby carriages. Sleek young Italians in striped suits and boutonniers, panicking the tenement girls.

They talk of the Cafe de la Paix as a cosmopolitan focal point, and of the self-conscious sidewalk cafes of Montparnasse, but Tompkins square is vivid with unposed human medley. There are half a dozen such racial potpourris in New York, but this is my favorite. Union square is too full of soap boxes and pale mauve intellectualities.

Take the Russian Carpathian Orthodox Greek church, on the corner of St. Mark's place and Avenue B. Peeking into its Gothic dusk, I was amazed to hear a radio playing "Just One More Chance" from somewhere upstairs. And a careless sign announced "Leonardo Da Vinci Art School."

A dark-eyed, plumpish model in a brief blue dress, gowned whisked by me and scurried upstairs to the life class on the second floor. That church, one of the oldest in the town, has changed denominations several times in the course of its tumultuous history. It has been Episcopal, Catholic, Lutheran and Greek Orthodox. Mrs. S. S. Fish once owned it and gave it to St. Mark's-in-the-Bowery.

ANTICIPATION

In a season of thin, unoriginal drama, I am looking forward to the opening of S. N. Behrman's "Brief Moment" as a possible reason for continuing to live in Manhattan, for I have heard it argued time after time that eating and theater-going are the only justifications for permanent New York residence. So far this fall we have had to be content with the eating, whenever we could afford that.

Mr. Behrman will be remembered for his acerbic humor. "Second Man" and his driving and, to me, immensely moving "Meteor." Behrman, along with about three others, must write the good plays of future first nights until a new crop of competent young playwrights materialize. I recall no youngster to get excited about in the theater since the advent of Mr. Philip Barry.

THEM WERE THE DAYS.—What the modern hotel needs is poetry. I suggest that the press departments of modern skyscraper taverns hold conferences to this end, and that the following advertisement for the old Holland house, printed in 1898, be read aloud:

"The walls of the bridal suite, whose general style suggests the Empire period, are of satin-hyacinth, while the hangings are of a peachy tint brocaded delicately with garlands of roses. The furniture is so elegant one almost covets the occupancy, and the bedroom adjoining, furnished in pale sage brocade with brass bedsteads, luxurious couches and chairs which woo the weary, also a bath so dainty in its furnishings that it suggests Diana and her nymphs, accentuate the coquettishness 'till it becomes a longing desire."

A Touting Picture but the Background Ruins It

WORLD PEACE TREATIES LOOK MOST IMPRESSIVE UNTIL TROUBLE STARTS

WASHINGTON.—International peace agreements are all right until trouble starts.

So long as no dispute arises between any two or more of the signatories of such a document as the Kellogg treaty, for example, the covenant presents a very attractive appearance on paper.

However, let one member of the group launch a military campaign against a fellow member, as Japan (a Kellogg pact adherent) recently did against China (a second adherent) and an exceedingly embarrassing situation immediately confronts the bystander adherents, bound as they are by their mutual understanding to intervene pacifically in the quarrel, yet quite aware that the country which launched the campaign will resent being asked to cease its martial activities; otherwise it would not have begun them.

This is just the dilemma which did, in fact, confront Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson upon the outbreak of hostilities (perhaps not actual warfare, but sure-enough fighting) between Japan and China in Manchuria last September.

China, indeed, being hopelessly outclassed by Japan except in point of undisciplined, ill-armed numbers, far from objecting to outside intervention, she clamored loudly for it—under the Kellogg treaty, by the League of Nations or from any other source—but Tokyo has given the world plainly to understand that the Japanese will not take kindly to interference, no matter from what quarter.

Possibly there is no better reason why the United States should interfere, by virtue of the Kellogg pact, in the China-Japanese difficulty, than why the League of Nations should interfere in it, on general principles—but certainly there is as good reason for the one to interfere as for the other to do so.

Nevertheless, it evidently seemed judicious to Secretary Stimson to yield precedence to the League of Nations. That was the course he pursued, anyhow.

No one questions the wisdom of his policy.

Some folk refer to it as a case of buck passing, but all concede that the buck was red hot, and that it was sound judgment, if not the highest quality of nerve, to get rid of it in a hurry.

Of course the United States, Japan and China are not the only countries included in the Kellogg agreement; there are many others.

For all that, it essentially is an American treaty. It was the brainchild of an American secretary of state—Frank B. Kellogg, Secretary Stimson's predecessor. It was through American diplomatic efforts that Japan, China and all the remainder were induced to sign it. American statesmanship always has claimed credit for it.

Thus, had Secretary Stimson seen fit to make representations to Tokyo and Nanking under the terms of the Kellogg pact, they would have been conspicuously American, rather than international, representations, and Washington would have had to accept responsibility for them.

On the opposite hand, America takes no direct responsibility whatever, for the League of Nations' representations, not being a member of the league.

True, the Washington administration has announced itself as actively in support of the league's peace efforts in Manchuria, but supporting the league's efforts is decidedly less dubious a proposition than initiating its own.

State department officials are unusually candid, in admitting that the department did not fancy the idea of reminding Tokyo of Japan's obligations as a Kellogg pact signatory, at the risk of being told, in effect, "Mind your own business"—an answer it would have been hard for Uncle Sam to swallow with a pleasant expression.

Washington knows this by actual experience, for it tried the experiment a couple of years ago on Moscow, at a time when friction over Manchuria existed between the Russians and China. The United States received a snippy response from the Soviet government and had to make the best of it—not having any other recourse short of declaring war, which naturally was out of the question on any such issue. Just the same, the state department did not like it.

To be sure, present indications are that the League of Nations will not have much better luck with Japan than Uncle Sam had with Russia, but there are so many countries in the league that, if they have anything disagreeable to swallow, they can divide up and it will not rest quite so heavily upon any individual national stomach.

What worries the state department now is the problem whether, if the League of Nations falls down utterly on the job of intervention, America will not, after all, finally have to attempt it.

The suggestion already is being advanced that, supposing Japan tears down world opposition to the extent of forcing a free hand on the Asiatic continent, the necessity for powerful armaments scarcely can be regarded as having been so completely relegated to the past as to justify further reductions by other nations.

On this ground, members of the Washington diplomatic colony are going so far as to predict that next winter's naval conference will be called off unless a Manchurian compromise is arrived at.

That President Hoover would regard his disarmament plans' collapse as immeasurably worse than a mere disappointment is fully recognized. His whole program for international economic rehabilitation is bound up in pending negotiations for the curbing of militarism.

In the event that the Kellogg pact should prove the last thing to fall back upon, in an effort to prevent such a catastrophe, Washington diplomacy is not even yet certain that it will not have the Manchurian case to deal with.

Depression Brings Many Problems

By LOGAN CLENDENIN, M. D.

Doctors are likely to see a great deal of it, in fact—the sick poor. I have been getting the experiences of many of my colleagues and some of the general aspects of the situation are as follows:

A famous diagnostician said: "Two years ago a man would come into my office with his wife, the latter being the patient. After she had been examined, he would say: 'I believe I will have you go over me thoroughly while I am here, just to see whether I am in good shape or not.' I have noticed since the depression there is very little of that. The people who go through the clinic, just to see whether they are all right, are in the minority. If they feel healthy they are content now to let well enough alone."

A famous surgeon said: "We have always distinguished two kinds of surgical operations—operations of necessity and operations of choice. Operations of choice are those which are not imperative to save life; they can be postponed; they are designed to put the individual in better health. Nowadays operations of choice—such as for chronic appendicitis—have disappeared from the record."

A general practitioner said: "I haven't seen a case of neurotic dyspepsia for a month. I used to see three a week. I have a well-to-do clientele. At least, they used to be well-to-do. When things were on the up and up they had leisure to worry about their insides, they ate too much and too rich food, they drank too much. Perhaps now they have something else to think about besides their stomachs."

These opinions may explain President Hoover's statement that, according to Surgeon General Cummings, "The public health has apparently never been better than it has over the past six months."

Exception was taken to this by the New York City department of hospitals. There it is said the hospitals and clinics have 25 per cent more patients than in periods of full employment. The surgeon general's statement excludes epidemics and deals only in death rate.

Even if it deals in death rates it is a remarkable fact to consider, it reminds us of the experience of the life insurance companies with the civil population of Germany during the war. Death losses in this group steadily went down as the war continued. It was ascribed in my hearing by the medical director of a large insurance company to the reduction in rations enforced on the middle-aged population. As they ate less they became healthier.

Mrs. Margaret Sanger, the high priestess of birth control, suggests that there be a moratorium on babies for two years. There are to be no babies for two years, and Mrs. Sanger, for an increasing this will be a relief, according to population plus an increasing unemployment rate. There isn't much danger of it, but the prospect of a world without babies is the last horror of a decaying civilization.

Wife Kills Mate's Love by Nagging

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

How can a man love his wife as he did the day he married her after he has gone through years of unpleasantness with her?

This is a sentence in a letter written by a man who has ceased to love his wife.

The answer is, of course, that he can't, any more than a woman who has for years been unkindly treated can care for her husband as she did when she married him.

What is to be done in case either husband or wife is thoroughly disillusioned with their mate and meets another with whom they feel sure they could be happy?

"Dear Miss Lee: Despite the fact that your column seems to be devoted to women after reading your most excellent advice to Lonesome, I think perhaps you might be of help to me; or, at any rate, offer a few words of consolation."

"Lonesome" is desirous of knowing how she can regain her husband's love. How can a man ever love a woman the same as when he married her after he has gone through years of misery and unpleasantness with her?

"Of course later on, when he becomes acquainted with another whom he knows he would be happy with, and his wife is afraid of losing him, then she pretends to love him."

"Now, Miss Lee, I hear you say. You haven't tried living with this other woman. But after working seven or eight years in an office, day after day, with a person, their true disposition will show up."

"Don't think I am 'stepping out' with this woman just because I love her. Just answer my question. How can I love my wife the same as I did the first day I married her? I say IMPOSSIBLE."

"Disgusted."

And I'm afraid I'll have to echo, "Impossible." Disgusted. Just as it seemed to be impossible for Lonesome's husband to forgive and love her as he did before she showed such a hateful spirit towards his people.

That's the sad part of such actions. They kill love, and once dead it is impossible to revive it, no matter how penitent the person may be.

You can only go on doing what you think is right until time or circumstances change, and you can, perhaps, be happier ahead of you.

May that time soon come in your case.

Removing Cork From Nail Polish

By GLADYS GLAD

It's a common enough occurrence, I suppose. You've probably experienced it yourself at one time or another. But it's a most annoying one. You decide, at some auspicious moment to give yourself a handsome manicure—or to retouch your previous one. And you sit down and attend to all the necessary details of nail care until you finally arrive at the polishing stage.

Then you unsuspectingly grasp your bottle of nail polish and attempt to remove the cork. And that's about all you do—attempts. For that cork suddenly becomes surprisingly stubborn and absolutely refuses to budge. And when you grow impatient and give it an extra hearty tug, you suddenly find yourself holding half the cork in your hand, while the other half is still snugly reposing in the neck of the bottle.

If you are a persistent cuss, and hard to discourage, you decide to get that cork out or die in the attempt. You arm yourself with the implement nearest at hand, regardless of its size or fitness, and get to work on the cork. And by the time you've finished with it, it certainly is a sorry looking spectacle.

I've often wondered why the manufacturers of nail polish do not, as a whole, provide rubber or glass stoppers for their nail polish bottles, just as they do for their polish remover and cuticle remover bottles.

Of course, some of them do. But the majority of them don't, and it often means a loss of both time and money for the users of liquid nail polish. For if, in its removal, broken bits of the cork drop into the polish, they will render it unusable. Or if the mutilated cork is placed back in the bottle, the polish has been used, the air will be able to get at it. And the next time that you attempt to apply it, the polish will be so thick that it will refuse to spread evenly over the nails, and you will be unable to use it.

After you have once used a bottle of polish, never try to remove the cork by pulling or tugging at it. First take a pair of tiny scissors and slide one blade down between the cork and the bottle. Then circle the cork completely with the blade, and you'll find that the cork will come out perfectly. If you follow this precaution every time that you use the polish thereafter, the nail enamel will be "good to the last drop."

TROY MAKES STRONG BID TO LEAD LEAGUE AS PIQUA TOTTERS

Piqua High School, reigning monarch of Miami Valley League football since the athletic combine was formed three years ago, is tottering on the throne.

In fact, the king has just about abdicated with Troy and Sidney as joint pretenders to the crown.

Destroying a jinx of a decade, Sidney High's powerful eleven spotted the Indians a first quarter advantage of thirteen points, then rose in its might to swamp the defending league champions, 27 to 13 at Sidney Saturday. It was Sidney's first league engagement and the second for Piqua, which two weeks ago was held to a 6 to 6 tie by Xenia Central.

Troy High's speedy team won its second straight league victory and took undisputed leadership of the league Saturday with a 14 to 6 conquest of Miamisburg on the Burger gridiron. Here is the league standing:

Team	Won	Lost	Tied	Pct.
Troy	2	0	0	1.000
Sidney	1	0	0	1.000
Xenia	0	0	1	.000
Piqua	0	1	1	.000
Miamisburg	0	1	0	.000

National Farm Outlook

By ARTHUR H. JENKINS
Editor, The Farm Journal
Written for Central Press

Extracting moonshine from artichokes has long been regarded as an unpromising activity, and it may be that the hope of extracting some good out of the present farm credit situation is equally flimsy.

Many sets of agricultural brains are engaged, however, in devising ways and means for doing just that thing, and it must be said that some of their arguments sound at least plausible.

Bonds of the land bank, both the federal banks owned jointly by farmers and the government, and the joint stock banks that are privately owned, are selling at great discounts. There is nothing surprising about that. Every bond for which a poor demand exists is heavily depressed, no matter how good its security.

The federal farm loan bonds, secured by conservative mortgages on good farms, completely tax-free, guaranteed morally though not legally by the government, are selling on the day this is written at seventy-one for the four per cent up to eighty-six for the five per cent bonds. The bonds of most private joint stock banks are much lower.

But the question is, not how low the bonds are, or how they got there, but how some profit can be coined out of the situation.

The first possibility is that the land banks themselves, if they have loose cash, can strengthen their own positions by buying in their own bonds and retiring them. By investing say $750 cash, they can thus relieve themselves of a $1,000 liability—of course at the expense of the bond holder.

This, in fact, is already being done. It is limited by the principle that if the land bank has any loose cash, it ought to use it to make further loans to farmers in its territory. But it is being done nevertheless.

The other possibility, which is intended to help farmers more directly, is that arrangements be made so that a borrower, if he gets hold of some cash, can buy land bank bonds and turn them in at full par value, to pay off his mortgage.

That would be a big help to the farmer, and would not injure the land banks in any wise. Again it is the bond holder who would lose, but not any more than he is already losing, through the lower market value of his bonds.

The federal farm loan board (which you must remember is not the federal farm board) does not, however, look favorably on this scheme, and probably will not adopt it unless directed to do it by congress. And maybe not then. Their objections do not seem very serious to me, but then I may be prejudiced.

What would probably happen if such a plan went through would be that the land bank bonds would tend to rise toward par, which would take all the stuffing out of the scheme. But even then, who would not be pleased if the bonds went to par?

LIGHT, VENTILATION OF JAIL CRITICIZED BY SOCIAL WORKER

Lack of proper light and ventilation in the Greene County Jail is criticized in a report submitted to county officials by S. C. Griffin, social investigator for the department of public welfare of Ohio, who recently conducted an inspection of the facility.

The report recommended that heavy cross bars at the windows "which shut out practically all light and ventilation" should be replaced by modern heavy wire mesh screen and the windows enlarged, or a system of induced ventilation be provided whereby air in the cell blocks is changed six times every hour.

"The worst conditions prevailing at the jail has been removed through exclusion of juveniles from the jail," the investigator set forth in his report. "This provides better opportunity for classification of male prisoners."

Since the room which was provisioned in the jail for juveniles and women is no longer occupied by juveniles and rarely by women, it is recommended by the state department that it be used as frequently as possible for classification or segregation of adult male prisoners, that is, separation of those awaiting trial and the young first offender from experienced criminals.

The upper and lower cell blocks of the jail proper are not separated and do not permit this suggested classification, the report said.

Aside from the lack of classification of inmates, the worst condition noted is of a sanitary nature, the report concluded, referring to the absence of light and ventilation that has been made the basis of recommendations on the part of successive grand juries.

JEWELS VALUED AT $50,000 STOLEN

ABOARD S. S. ILE DE FRANCE, Oct. 20.—A $50,000 jewel theft was under investigation today aboard the French liner Ile De France, en route from Le Havre to New York.

The robbery victim was a wealthy American society woman, Mrs. R. J. Anderson of Newport, R. I., whose stateroom was entered while she was in the dining-salon.

The ship's officers prevented news of the theft from becoming generally known among the passengers, but special precautions were taken to guard staterooms of Premier Pierre Laval and other French government officials, who are traveling on the Ile De France en route to Washington.

The officers said they believed the jewels were taken by members of an international gang of jewel thieves.

The Eyes Have It

While beautiful feminine faces and figures have been judged many times in contests to determine championship pulchritude, Paris has just completed a successful "Most Beautiful Eyes of Paris" competition. Nobody can deny that Mlle. Nine Robert (above) has orbs that ought to win any contest in which they're entered—and they did win!

N. Y. STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—Stocks moved upward all along the line this morning on the general understanding that gold withdrawals from the United States and foreign selling of American stocks had been completed. There was some disposition to look to Washington for the commerce commission's decision on railroad rates "later in the day," but informed quarters did not look for the decision until Saturday.

So This is Washington

By Central Press
WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—The old British embassy at the corner of Connecticut avenue and N street is in the hands of wreckers. Blast-bomb busters shattered the building and trucks strewed the old driveway with lumber, and before them lumbering broughams, deposited their lovely burdens.

Always the needle's eye of the national capital was that particularly hideous bit of architecture. It had the air of applying a lognette to the various camels which presented themselves. Late the general depression seems to have greased the hinges so that they open a little wider, but a generation ago a bid to put beneath the lion and the unicorn was considered making the grade.

That portrait of Queen Victoria—terribly regal and slightly puffed-up—which used to confront the bewildered debutants and gave her that Alice-in-Wonderland feeling, was she really awake or dreaming?

It's always been easy enough to crash the White House or Cabinet strongholds—the queerer you look the more important you are likely to be—as for congressional and senatorial houses. Polly puts the kettle on at least once a week, and tea, if not a good time, is had by all. But the old British embassy used to be a stronghold.

Memory goes back over a long list of chateaus—the delightful Howards, Geddeses, Readings, Bryces, back to the Sackville-Wests, whose amazing family history dwarfs anything that clever daughter of their house has done in fiction.

Suits to establish legitimacy, sisters and brothers suing for legal status before the courts, a marriage between the right and left wings. "Knole," one of the most imposing of English estates, by that marriage assured to both.

The house was newly furnished for a visit of King James. They still have some of the incomparable furniture. Well, as Miss Sackville-West writes, she has never done anything which touches the family history for drama.

READ THIS FIRST:

Lois Corbin, a pretty working girl, falls in love with Bruce Durant, who is from one of the wealthiest families in Chicago. Ashamed to let him know where she lives, Lois leaves her family and goes to share an apartment with Arlene and Margaret, two girl friends. Bruce does not meet her to take her down to work, as he has promised, and Lois begins to know the first bitter disappointments of love. Lois' worries are over, however, when Margaret stops at the desk and tells her that Bruce had to break his date with her on account of business. He comes to take her to lunch, and before he leaves he asks her to go out dancing with him on the following Saturday.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER 8

BRUCE was waiting to take Lois home again that evening. It was a comforting feeling, coming out and finding someone waiting for one. It was the first time Lois ever had anyone care that much about her. That is, someone that she herself liked.

"You'll have to take her home tonight," Lois said. "I have a lot of things that I want to do."

Bruce looked at her accusingly. "Sure they aren't any dates that you have?"

Lois said, "No, silly. Don't you think a girl ever has to take care of her clothes?"

Bruce said, "I suppose so. But why can't you do that after we've had dinner?"

Lois thought how nice it would be after she had moved in with Margaret and Arlene to have Bruce waiting to take her to dinner every night. No one to ask her where she had been, no one worrying about the lateness of the hour. She wished she were all moved now, but she wasn't.

"Well," Lois said, "maybe I can after tonight. But I really had planned to do lots tonight."

Bruce looked disappointed. "Guess I'll have to do as you say," he said. He turned the car into the north-bound traffic.

Lois looked at the buses now and the people riding on them with a little feeling of superiority. She felt as set up in her own estimation as did the ladies who passed her in their luxurious chauffeured limousines.

Bruce and Lois sat in front of the Bellaire a long time. It seemed as if they couldn't separate. "I guess you don't realize how much I think of you," Bruce said. He held his head down a little bashfully and played with the big onyx ring that he wore on his left hand. "I miss you all the time. I've never been this way about a girl before."

He looked up at her. "Sometimes I don't think you believe me. The way you look at me," he said.

Lois thought: "If you only knew how I want to believe you, Bruce Durant. If you realized the truth. That is the barrier that I feel is between us that is keeping me from telling you right this minute how much I miss you. How much you mean to me."

She said, "Of course, I believe you, Bruce. Except, all men say the same thing, you know."

Bruce said, "I know. There isn't anything new about love. There isn't any new way of expressing it. You just have to feel it. And trust in it."

Lois said, "Well then, you must trust me. She wanted him to trust her so much that she could deceive him for awhile and then she wanted him to love her enough so that when he did find out about her family it would not matter to him."

Bruce held her hand firmly in his own. "I do trust you, Lois. I didn't mean that you had any date tonight. I guess I was only fooling. Except, I'm so jealous I can't seem to think of your being with anyone else."

He said goodbye to her reluctantly and Lois got out and went upstairs. Margaret and Arlene were already home. They sat around for awhile and discussed everything about the office and about Bruce and about the new living arrangement.

"You've certainly got that boy crazy about you," Margaret said. "And he's a catch!"

Arlene was curling her hair in front of the mirror. Lois could see her through the crack in the door. "Margaret's been telling me what an Apollo he is. I'm dying to get a good look at him," Arlene said. "Is he coming down tonight?"

Lois said, "No. I told him I had things to do tonight. And I have. I'm going home and bring my things over."

Margaret said, "I'll help you if you want me to."

Lois thought that might not be a bad idea. It might do away with a lot of explanation. Her mother would not be so likely to remonstrate if there were another girl with her.

Luckily enough, Mrs. Corbin was over at a neighbor's apartment and Mr. Corbin was playing cards in the front room. He paid no attention to Lois except to notice that she came in and went upstairs. Hurriedly Lois threw her few clothes into her battered old suitcase and she and Margaret dashed down the stairs and into the street. Strangely enough, Lois had no feeling of regret as she left the dingy little neighborhood that always had been her home. Anything, she felt that she had been freed from chains of convention that had bound her very personality.

She left a note on her dresser giving her address, but asking that no one come to try to get her to return home, that she had made her mind up to live with Arlene and Margaret. That nothing could change her mind. She hoped that her family would try to understand her attitude, that she believed she had a right to live her own life as she saw fit and that she did not feel as though she still owed them anything.

It was a cruel little note, and yet it was the way Lois felt about things. Margaret told her it was perfectly all right, that if her mother didn't understand it now she would some day.

Margaret helped Lois unpack her belongings and hang them in the closet. She cleaned out one of the untidy drawers of the chiffonier and told Lois that she could put her underwear and things like that in there. She also gave Lois one of the little glass shelves of the medicine cabinet.

"We keep our cosmetics and tooth paste and everything like that in here," she explained to Lois. Lois thought she was supposed to do like wise, although all she possessed was a box of powder and a rouge box, which she carried in her purse with her lipstick.

"You'll be able to buy a lot of little things living here with us," Margaret remarked as she glanced over Lois' shabby array of dresses.

Lois said, "I hope so."

Margaret went breezily on, "If you want to wear anything that belongs to Arlene or to me, in the meantime, you're more than welcome to it."

"Thanks a lot," Lois said. "I may want to do that." She was thinking about Saturday night.

"We mustn't take a chance on your losing Bruce on account of not having pretty enough clothes," Lois wished Margaret would quit trying to make out as though she were deliberately trying to catch Bruce Durant. It was true that she did care for him and if ever he asked her to marry him she would be the happiest person on earth, but she didn't want to feel as though she were angling for him.

It was late that night when the three of them got to bed. Lois and Margaret had to wait for Arlene to get through with her date, for she insisted on bringing him in for a few minutes. The few minutes lengthened themselves into hours, so that Lois was finally twelve o'clock before Lois could get into her makeshift bed.

The daydreamer was too short for her as Margaret had said it would be. But also, as Margaret had said, it was better than nothing. She stretched out as much as was possible and lay there in the darkness thinking. Thinking about Bruce Durant, and what the outcome of their association would be.

Her neck hurt a little because she had to keep it in such an odd position. He felt stuck out at the bottom, too, where the sheet flapped over the end of the davenport. It didn't matter so much now, in the summer time, but Lois thought it probably would be uncomfortable sleeping that way in the winter.

Lois thought of her own bed at home, of its crisp white sheets, its comfortable, feathery pillow, of waking in the night to feel her mother's gentle hand pulling up the covers over her when it became cool. She had a queer little feeling which would have developed into homesickness if she hadn't been so sleepy.

WORKS FIFTY YEARS BUT WON'T RETIRE

MARION, O., Oct. 19.—For fifty years H. C. Paddock has served the Hocking Valley railroad, but not for one moment will he listen to any talk about retirement.

A firm belief in the relationship between work and happiness is the basis for his decision. "Work is the only thing that will keep a man happy and contented, he puts it, and declared he does not propose to end his working days for a long time."

His term of service with the railroad, a division of the Chesapeake and Ohio, starts with the beginning of the road's history. Even before he joined the employ of the railroad he had one of the greatest experiences of his life on one of its trains.

It was in 1876 that the first train of road then known as the Columbus and Toledo puffed its way through Marion. Paddock and a chum clambered aboard and had an eventful ride to Columbus.

His wife with whom he recently celebrated their twenty-second wedding anniversary, is a sympathetic

ANTIOCH CUSTOMS REVEALED BY DEAN BEFORE ASSEMBLY

Customs of Antioch College, Yellow Springs, were reviewed Monday in the second assembly of Division B for the benefit of Jew students.

Dean Algo G. Henderson, in his explanation of "Why We Behave Like Antiochians," characterized as three distinguishing features of the college community the uniform trust and confidence that exist among its members, the general respect for each other's worth as individuals, and the expectation of his purpose and good motives on the part of everyone.

The speaker urged the application of these principles in various aspects of campus life. "The honor system is now perhaps more successful at Antioch than it has ever been. In the classroom this means that during an unsupervised examination a student group will conduct itself as though an instructor were present. In the broadest sense it means that Antiochians will act honorably in all circumstances—that they will observe Antioch standards."

With reference to social customs, Dean Henderson remarked, "It is good of course to secure wide social experience as possible, and college years are the time to gain social ease. When our entertainments are planned to help us in the realization of that goal, they are of value. However, when elaborate arrangements are made simply because it is 'the thing to do,' we are approaching a narrowness that none of us would wish to see at Antioch."

Desirable characteristics of Antioch students were suggested as a democratic spirit, particularly evidenced in social life; responsibility, developed by cooperative work and autonomous study; initiative, both in matters of community government and in the field of social development; maturity, and idealism, tempered by the practicality of experience.

geles officers that the dismembering of Miss Lerol's body had been effected with a bread knife.

Police said one of the photographs found wrapped in a piece of bedclothing with part of Miss Lerol's body was that of Hugh Angle, 27, of Portland, Ore., manufacturer, sportsman and aviator.

PHOENIX, ARIZ., Oct. 20.—Miss Agnes Lerol, 35, a nurse at Grunow Memorial Clinic here, and Miss Hedwig Samuelson, 24, a school teacher, whose nude and headless bodies were found in two trunks in a Los Angeles railroad Station, were killed late Saturday night in their apartment at 2929 N. Second St., George Brishoin, chief of police, said today.

Bloodstains found on rugs and furniture indicated the two women had been killed and their bodies placed in trunks and taken to 1130 E. Brill St., where Mrs. Ruth Judd, who formerly roomed with Miss Lerol and Miss Samuelson, resided.

H. U. Grimm, a baggage man, told Chief Brishoin he had helped a Mrs. Judd who had been a private secretary to a physician at the clinic, carry the trunks from her apartment to his automobile Sunday afternoon. They took the trunks to the railroad station.

Mrs. Judd, Grimm told officers, purchased a ticket to Los Angeles and checked the two trunks. Grimm said Mrs. Judd told him the trunks contained books.

Chief Brishoin said he had learned that Mrs. Judd until two weeks ago had been on friendly terms with Miss Lerol and Miss Samuelson, but that they had quarreled.

Chief Brishoin said he learned Miss Lerol and Miss Samuelson had entertained another nurse, Mrs. Alfred Nance, at dinner Friday night.

Mrs. Nance was a nurse employed at the same hospital with Miss Lerol and Mrs. Judd.

Simultaneously with the disappearance of Miss Lerol and Miss Samuelson, Mrs. Judd, Chief Brishoin said, also vanished.

The trunks were shipped as baggage from Phoenix at 8:10 o'clock Sunday night, indicating Chief Brishoin said, that Miss Samuelson and Miss Lerol had been slain late Saturday or early Sunday.

Detectives said that bloodstains were found in the apartment that Miss Lerol and Miss Samuelson had occupied. A rug under the bed was heavily clothed as were chairs and a small library table.

How the killer disposed of the clothing which was removed from the slain pair was a puzzle to police.

Physicians at Grunow Memorial Hospital said that Miss Lerol and Miss Samuelson came to Phoenix about a year ago from Juneau, Alaska. They also were believed to have resided for a time in Seattle, Wash., as numerous photographs made of the pair in Seattle were found in the apartment.

Miss Lerol was a registered nurse. Miss Samuelson was ill and had come to Phoenix to regain her health, physicians told police. The pair had lived a secluded life in the north second Avenue apartment.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 20.—Inspector of Railroad Detectives David

Davidson announced today that two special agents of the Southern Pacific Railroad had in custody on the Golden Gate limited a woman answering the description of Mrs. Ruth Judd, wanted for the double murder of Agnes Lerol and Hedwig Samuelson.
